Patina

The Living Study launch collection

A place at the beginning.

A personal introduction.
A founding community.
A thoughtful next chapter.

Where Time Adds Value.

Illustrative imagery — awaiting partner photography.

Begin with the people closest to the work.

Leah's clients first. Madison press next. Thoughtful designer and maker conversations alongside them. Let the new website give each invitation somewhere meaningful to land.

The main invitation

Founding members

People who care about how their home comes together. Invite their judgment, their questions, and the things they notice.

Join the Founding Circle

A professional invitation

Designers

Working designers who want their experience represented in the tools. Kody opens the conversation; Leah brings a peer's perspective.

Apply to the Founding 50

A craft invitation

Makers

People whose materials and decisions deserve more space in furniture discovery. Begin by understanding their actual work.

Apply to Partner

The website is live. The public app and marketplace remain pre-launch. Membership is open everywhere; the Midwest is the starting point for outreach.

Two perspectives. One reason to build.

Leah sees what belongs.

Through Middle West Studio, Leah brings the judgment of a working interior designer: the person living in a room, the things they already love, the scale of a piece, and the way a material feels.

Her voice should show us something worth noticing. A room begins with the person living in it.

Design & Experience

Kody sees a gap in the tools.

The tools around creative work can feel sterile and detached from the work itself. Kody is building Patina to make room for exploration, connections, and changing your mind.

His voice should explain a real choice in the making. The tool should belong in the process.

Technology & Product

We're building a more personal way to discover furniture, with a designer's judgment, a maker's care, and your own point of view.

Read the full narrative and interview guide

The first letter is only the beginning.

On joining

A welcome from Kody.

The existing signup email explains why Patina is being built and invites a reply.

Already implemented

Day 7

A piece you have kept.

A personal question about the furniture that has earned its place.

EMAIL-08

Day 21

A conversation worth carrying.

What would you want a designer to understand before you met?

EMAIL-09

By Day 30

A say in what comes next.

The first monthly question asks which area of furniture to explore more closely.

EMAIL-10

What membership carries

First access when the app launches. Monthly questions. Studio notes. Enduring founding status. Recognition at launch for members who choose it.

What makes it personal

Read the replies together. Record what they change. Skip a generic prompt when a real conversation is already underway.

Days are measured from joining. Followthrough is prepared manual correspondence, not a newly installed automation. Keep at least seven days between planned member letters.

Open gradually. Listen as you go.

Week 1

Personal introduction

Up to ten appropriate client invitations. Read the first replies, then open the public invitation with two posts.

Week 2

Madison introduction

Three individually chosen editorial approaches. Begin a small number of designer and maker conversations.

Week 3

The work behind it

Eligible personal followups, public trade invitations, and two more relevant Madison approaches.

Week 4

A question for the circle

Read Day-21 replies and prepare the monthly question. A regional pitch needs a real local connection.

Week 5

Selective regional reach

The first monthly question goes to members reaching Day 30. At most two regional pitches with a clear fit.

Week 6

Return with something real

Report what was learned, what changed or remains open, and what members will help shape next.

T0 is the first approved client invitation. No public launch date or event is assigned. Keep the flexible slots open for genuine replies and reporting opportunities.

Open the complete calendar with owners and asset IDs

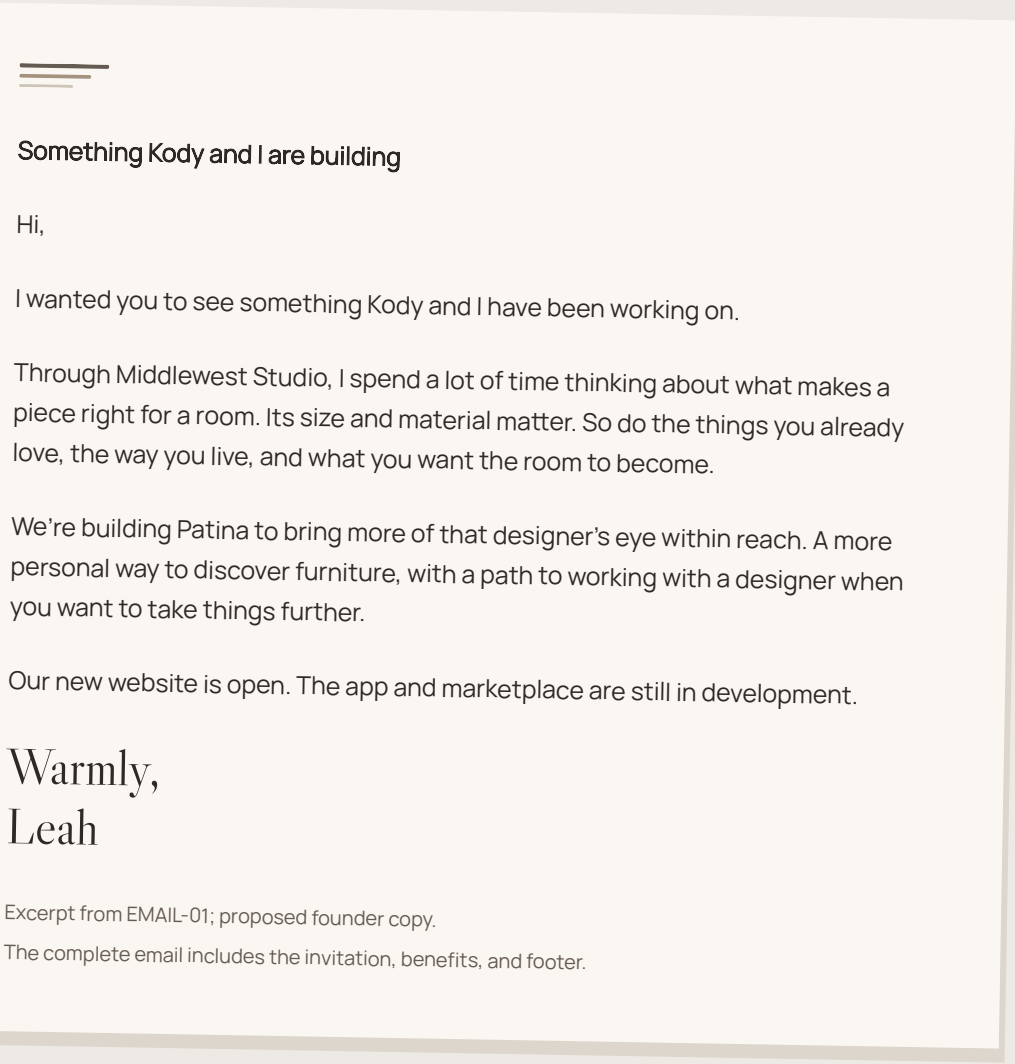

A note from someone you know.

Leah opens the invitation through her relationships. Kody welcomes people when they join and keeps the building story personal.

Ten complete messages are ready for review, from the first invitation through the first monthly question.

Open the email collection

Personalize with a real detail when appropriate. Stop prospect followups after a reply, signup, application, decline, or opt-out.

Something Kody and I are building

Hi,

I wanted you to see something Kody and I have been working on.

Through Middlewest Studio, I spend a lot of time thinking about what makes a piece right for a room. Its size and material matter. So do the things you already love, the way you live, and what you want the room to become.

We're building Patina to bring more of that designer's eye within reach. A more personal way to discover furniture, with a path to working with a designer when you want to take things further.

Our new website is open. The app and marketplace are still in development.

Warmly,
Leah

Excerpt from EMAIL-01; proposed founder copy.
The complete email includes the invitation, benefits, and footer.

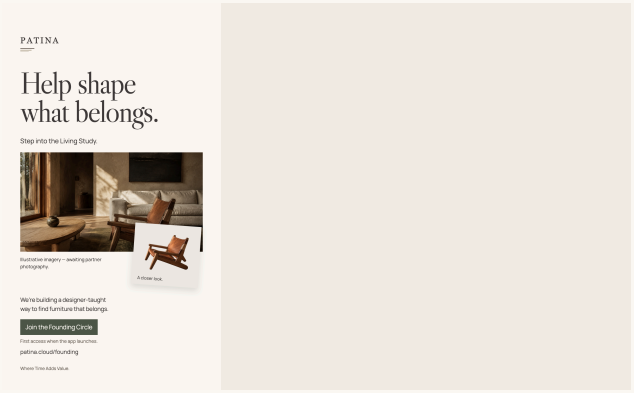

Six pieces, ready to use.

C01 / Founding invitation · 1080 × 1080

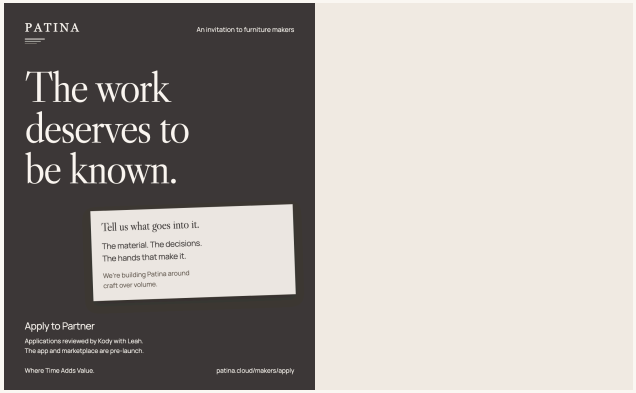

C02 / Furniture study · 1080 × 1350

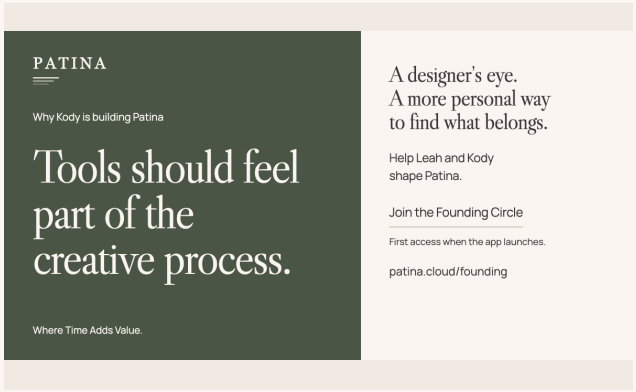

C03 / Story · 1080 × 1920

C04 / Designers · 1080 × 1350

C05 / Makers · 1080 × 1350

C06 / Kody's perspective · 1200 × 627

Exported PNGs and editable masters are included. Keep the visible illustrative labels and documentary credits. Founder portraits can follow.

Open the gallery and download individual artwork

Invite someone to look closer.

The room

The study

The making

A place at the beginning.

The invitation

Illustrative imagery — awaiting partner photography.

One 20-second journey

Let movement feel connected: a room opens, attention settles on a piece, the making comes into view, then the invitation holds. Use the full timed storyboard for production.

Play the interactive motion preview / Read the timed script

Useful with the sound off

Readable on-screen copy, no flashing or rapid cuts, and an unhurried final action. The finished C03 static Story carries the same invitation without motion.

The earned introduction

Give Madison a story it can make its own.

Three first approaches

BRAVA

Leah's working design perspective and the idea of a more personal home. Dedicated editorial submission form.

In Business Madison

A designer and product builder developing with a community before public product launch. Use its current journalism-policy submission route.

City Cast Madison

A local conversation about creative businesses and how people furnish their homes. One relationship for the show and Madison Minutes.

The announcement

Madison-founded Patina opens a place in its Founding Circle.

The Living Study introduces the founders' approach and a way to help shape it. The release is factual and quote-free. Add the real dispatch date when sending.

Ten researched targets include Chicago and Minneapolis options. Regional coverage needs actual local relevance; two routes have explicit verification holds.

Read the complete press kit

Open targets and official routes

Count the people. Read what they tell you.

The dashboard is in place.

Visitors and pageviews. Founding Circle signups. Designer and maker applications. Popular pages, referral sources, and the journey from a website visit to joining.

Signup totals use server confirmations and count each PostHog person once across the selected period. Browser copies do not inflate the total.

Open Patina Cloud Traffic & Signups

Traffic is consent-dependent. The funnel measures linked visitors. New member growth is reconciled against non-test enrollment records.

Six-week working targets

Founding members	25 new non-test enrollments
Designers	4 applications worth a conversation
Makers	2 applications worth a conversation
Member replies	5 substantive responses
Editorial interest	1 journalist conversation

Proposed planning targets, not forecasts. Rebase after Week 2 using the actual reachable audience. Program caps are separate.

The useful weekly question: what did someone understand, what did they join, and what did their reply teach us? Small samples call for counts and conversation, not a declared channel winner.

A launch two founders can actually keep.

Leah / roughly 2 hours a week

Choose the relationships. Personalize the client note. Bring design observations into the public copy. Help interpret the replies.

Kody / roughly 4 hours a week

Coordinate publishing and press. Send the product and trade correspondence. Handle replies, application queues, and measurement.

Proposed capacity allowances, plus a one-time joint review. No allocation has been accepted on anyone's behalf.

Thirty minutes together

1. Check replies, delivery, and deadlines.
2. Review new members and applications.
3. Read the questions behind the numbers.
4. Choose next week's two posts and personal outreach.

Base plan: $0 incremental media spend. Existing subscriptions and founder time remain costs. No paid campaign or event is required.

Keep the published application response windows: designers within seven days, makers within two weeks.

Before the first send: choose T0 and recipients, review the personal copy, verify the live joining path in a normal browser, and assign reply coverage. No campaign send or fresh production form test was performed while making this package.

Start with one personal note.

Direction & words

Complete launch playbook

Ten emails and member notes

Twelve social posts

Founder story and FAQs

Visuals & press

Six finished campaign graphics

Motion storyboard

Creative and photography guide

Press kit and founder bios

Tailored media pitches

Ten researched media targets

Execution & learning

Six-week publishing calendar

Tracked campaign links

Measurement and operations

Weekly scorecard

Outreach tracker

Member feedback log

Where Time Adds Value.

Complete draft collection. Editable sources included. Nothing sent, scheduled, purchased, or published.